RE: Neighborhood Workshop for SsCPA and Rezoning – Parcel 16392-001-000

To Whom It May Concern,

The attached Letter, Printed Public Notice, Mail-out List, and Mailed Notice Affidavit is being submitted as evidence that a Neighborhood Workshop was held in association with requests for a Small Scale Comprehensive Plan Amendment and a Rezoning for the parcel listed above. Fifteen members of the public attended the meeting where the details of the request for the Land Use and Zoning change were detailed. Neighbors were highly excited as evidenced by the comments on the attached sign-in sheet.

Thank you for your time and review of these materials. If you have any questions please feel free to call at either of the numbers below.

Respectfully Submitted,

A neighborhood workshop will be held to discuss a proposed land use change from Rural/Agriculture to Rural Commercial-Agriculture and a rezoning from Agriculture to BR: Retail Sales and Services on approximately 1.5 acres located at 12001 S US Hwy 441 (tax parcel number 16393-001-000). This is not a public hearing. The purpose of this meeting is to inform the neighboring property owners of the proposed development and to seek their comments.

Border wall could take at least 10 years to build

By Todd C. Frankel
The Washington Post

The current fight — and now 19-day federal government shutdown — over funding for a U.S.-Mexico border wall could look simple when you consider the logistics of actually building the fabled barrier: It would take an estimated 10,000 construction workers more than 10 years to build the kind of 1,000-mile wall that President Donald Trump has said he wants.

Even the more modest $5.7 billion in wall funding that Trump directly requested during a prime-time Oval Office address Tuesday to address what he called “a growing humanitarian and security crisis” would take an army of 10,000 workers more than two years to build and yield only 230 miles of barrier, according to estimates.

And even at 1,000 miles long, the steel-slatted border wall would still be too small to be a boon for U.S. steelmakers.

The full version of Trump’s envisioned border wall — featuring rarely tested heights cast over almost unimaginable distances — would cost at least $25 billion, said Ed Zarenski, who teaches construction estimation at Worcester Polytechnic Institute in Massachusetts. Zarenski spent 30 years figuring out project price tags for Gilbane, one of the nation’s largest construction firms.

“I wouldn’t say it’s impossible. But you’ve got to factor in engineering considerations,” Zarenski said. “And then I would say, is the project realistic? Probably not.”

After almost two years of Trump demanding that Congress fund his desire for an expanded southern border wall, little time has been spent determining how the project might actually come together. A project of this scale has rarely been attempted — not even by the developer-president himself when he was erecting New York skyscrapers.

The border’s landscape is uniquely remote and difficult. The project site is narrow and runs for miles. And there are unknowns, such as the maximum wind load for a fence reaching about three stories high.

The wall design currently favored by Trump appears to make heavy use of steel — which the president said would be good for the U.S. steel industry. About 3 million tons of steel would be needed for 1,000 miles of steel-slat wall and concrete base, according to Zarenski’s calculations, which factored in 8-inch hollow steel tubes standing 30-feet high and spaced every 14 inches.

But the demand for that steel would not land all at once. It would be stretched over the project’s life. If it took an optimistic 10 years to build, the wall would require less than half a percent of the annual U.S. appetite for finished steel.

The wall “would have a very limited impact for U.S. steelmakers,” said Josh Spoore, a steel analyst with the research firm CRU.

Trump has made supporting the U.S. steel industry one of his administration’s focal points. Last year, his administration slapped tariffs on steel imported into the United States, ostensibly to help domestic steelmakers. But the steel tariff also has hurt U.S. manufacturers who use steel and must contend with increased prices, said Jim Doyle, of the industry trade group Business Forward.

IN BRIEF

Comatose woman who had baby is hospitalized

PHOENIX — An Arizona woman in a vegetative state who was sexually assaulted at a long-term care facility and had a baby is recovering at a hospital along with her child, authorities said Wednesday.

Commenting for the first time on the investigation since the Dec. 29 birth came to light, Phoenix police said finding a suspect is a top priority. Police are gathering DNA from all male employees at the facility.

“She was not in a position to give consent to any of this,” police spokesman

Tommy Thompson said. “So if anyone can understand that, this was a helpless victim who was sexually assaulted.”

He didn’t release the conditions of the woman and child.

Hacienda HealthCare owns the care facility and said it welcomed the DNA testing. Authorities served a search warrant Tuesday.

“We will continue to cooperate with Phoenix police and all other investigative agencies to uncover the facts in this deeply disturbing, but unprecedented situation,” the company said in a statement.
